Love Letter to Norfolk

I have lived in Norfolk for most of my life. Born here, I am deeply passionate about the culture of Norfolk ways, its traditions, language and landscapes. Long a place on the edge - a destination in its own right, rather than somewhere passed through on the way elsewhere - it has largely avoided wholesale and detrimental change.

But now, the threats facing this remarkable county, which attracts so many who wish to relocate here, risk damaging the very qualities that make it so special.

Love may be blind, but it is difficult, if not impossible, to regard the changes now being actioned as anything other than degrading to the character of our cherished piece of England.
